

Adam H. Berry

Vice President, Economic Development and Technology

Adam H. Berry joined the Indiana Chamber in January 2019. In addition to his advocacy role on a variety of issues impacting entrepreneurship and innovation, he will help lead the ongoing evaluation and execution of the organization's Indiana Vision 2025 long-range economic development plan.

Adam is a former policy director and special counsel for Governor Mike Pence's administration, where he focused on small business economic development and entrepreneurship policies. Prior to joining the Chamber, he was co-founder and CEO of PoliticalBank.com, an all-inclusive campaign platform for candidates and voters that has been utilized for local, state and federal campaigns throughout the United States. Previous experiences also include serving as an associate attorney with Littler Mendelson and as associate general counsel for the Indiana Department of Insurance.

Adam, who resides in Carmel, earned a bachelor's degree from Wabash College and his law degree from Indiana University's McKinney School of Law in Indianapolis.
